ONCOLOGY

Cancer is more than a battle of the body, it is a journey through the mind and heart. The World Health Organization reveals that cancer stands as the second leading cause of death worldwide, touching over 20 million lives each year. Yet, within this struggle lies an often unseen fight, the emotional, psychological, and social challenges that accompany the diagnosis. Psycho-oncology emerges as a beacon of hope, blending science and compassion to heal not just the body, but the spirit. While oncologists are working towards enhancing the Quantity of Life, the Psycho-oncologist works upon the Quality of Life.

Our Psycho-Oncology Initiatives

Psycho-Oncology First Aid (POFA)

Psycho-Oncology First Aid (POFA) is an innovative training and awareness program designed to equip all stakeholders in cancer care with essential knowledge and skills to address the complex mental health challenges associated with cancer. POFA raises awareness about the psychological, emotional, and social issues faced by cancer patients, their families, and caregivers, fostering early identification and timely intervention by empowering healthcare professionals, volunteers, caregivers, and community organizations.

The word "cancer" is often synonymous with despair and death. To transform this narrative, the TSMH launched the inspiring C Positive Campaign, centred around the uplifting message: "Let's be C Positive", with the aim of fostering hope, resilience, and a positive outlook for those affected by cancer. As a part of this campaign, TSMH also established the C Positive Awards to honour and celebrate the extraordinary individuals and organisations making a profound impact in cancer care, shining a light on their dedication and contribution to improving lives.

Center for Psycho-Oncology

In 2023, the TSMH established the world's first independent Centre for Psycho-Oncology, dedicated to providing compassionate counseling support to cancer patients, their families, and caregivers. Since its inception, the center has profoundly impacted the lives of over a thousand individuals, offering holistic care that addresses the emotional and psychological challenges of the cancer journey and fostering resilience and hope throughout the community it serves.
